

If You Had A Chance To Become Part Of History...

Would You Take It?

On February 27, 1999, 500 attendees of the 8th International UFO Congress in Laughlin, Nevada, were the first people to see, hear about, and even touch a relic that, to this day, has not been confirmed by science as entirely human. That relic, known as the “Starchild Skull,” has undergone eight years of scientific analyses and medical evaluations. In the next two or three years, recent remarkable advances in genetic testing techniques are solidly on track to establish the Starchild as a human-alien hybrid.

Eight years ago those 500 Laughlin attendees became a part of history...and now it can be your turn. Lloyd Pye, the Starchild skull’s caretaker, has written a richly detailed, page-turning account of his efforts to have the skull tested and recognized for what it is.

This milestone book will not be released to the general public until July 7, 2007. Before then, however, it is being offered to all members of the “alternative knowledge” community in a special Collector’s Edition. Orders will be taken only until April 5, 2007, after which only the number of books ordered will be printed, and then delivered to purchasers in May.

Each copy will have the special “Collector’s Edition” cover seen here, and will be a 300+ page, top-notch hardback, with 64 full-color slides and several features to distinguish it from every subsequent edition. Each copy will be signed and hand-numbered by Lloyd Pye, giving it extra value to collectors.

Cost per book is $30.00 + the special flat rate of $5.00 shipping, no matter how many copies you order. Buy one or more and put them on a shelf. Over time, the worth of this investment in history will continue to appreciate well beyond the cover price.
